FDR Advisers Plan War Production Shakeup

CABAL PROGRAM SPREADS TERROR IN WASHINGTON

Ouster Of Marshall Said To Be Based On Refusal To Play Politics

NOD GIVEN SOMERVELL

General Believed Groomed As Running Mate For Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 — A group of influential White House advisers are planning today to give Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell personal control of the expenditure of twenty-two billion dollars in the coming year by a complete reorganization of the entire Army production front.

This domestic coup d'etat is the objective behind the Cabal's efforts to oust Gen. George C. Marshall from his post as Army chief of staff and "kick him upstairs" to a glorified but powerless world command over Anglo-American forces.

Informed sources say the motive is to use the Army's vast production program, excepting aircraft, as a political weapon in the 1944 presidential campaign. Aircraft production, now based exclusively by Gen. H. H. Arnold, Army air chief, may be included later.

Some observers believe the cabal also intends to build up Somervell as an Army running-mate for Mr. Roosevelt on a fourth term ticket to offset the possible Republican nomination of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

There is no evidence whatever that either President Roosevelt or Gen. Marshall has ever heard of the purpose or potential effect of the plot. Knowledge of it, however, has spread terror through the highest ranks of the War department.

Can Be Stopped

It can be stopped by the President refusing to oust Gen. Marshall from his present control of the Army. Marshall's friends know he would prevent any political manipulation of Army affairs. That is why the cabal is determined to oust him.

It can be stopped by congress, regardless of Marshall's fate.

DELAYS REPORT $5,265 THEFT TO CURE COLD

CHICAGO, Sept. 25—Joseph Kuchan, 56, Chicago steel worker, today walked in to a police station and reported he had been robbed of $5,265.

"What time and where did the robbery occur?" Sgt. Tim Curley asked.

"Last Tuesday night late on Adams street, about a half mile from home."

Sgt. Curley asked where Kuchan had waited so long to report his loss.

"Well I had an awful sore throat and thought I'd better wait till I could talk better," Kuchan said.

He explained that two Negroes fastened a towel around his neck, choked him into unconsciousness and then robbed him of two $1,000 bills, six $500 bills, two $100 bills and his $65 pay check, all of which he carried in his shirt pocket.

Bullet From "Unloaded" Rifle Kills Girl, 13, In Home Of Playmate

Joyce Carter, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Carter, 141 West High street, was killed almost instantly shortly before midnight Friday by a bullet from a .22 rifle "which was not loaded."

The little girl was lying in bed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul (Stook) Valentine, 151 West High street, where she had spent the evening with Nora Jean Valentine, 16, and Patty Valentine, 10, while Mr. and Mrs. Valentine were at the Circleville-Hillsboro football game.

Police Chief W. F. McCrady, who investigated the tragedy, said the Carter girl was lying on the bed when the younger Valentine child picked up the .22 rifle standing in the room. She was showing her sister and the Carter child how the rifle operated when it discharged. Patty told Chief McCrady she didn't know there was a bullet in the bolt action rifle.

The bullet entered the Carter girl's right cheek and passed upward through the head. Dr. Ned Griner was called to the home and the fire department hurried to the scene with its inhalator, but the child had died.

One of the girls ran to the Carter home to summon Mrs. Carter. Mr. and Mrs. Valentine had not yet arrived home when the tragedy took place. The Carter girl's father, a sergeant stationed at Fort Hayes, was contacted during the night.

The three girls had spent the evening together playing and were preparing for bed when the accident happened.

Chief McCrady examined the rifle and took it to police headquarters with him. The bullet, which killed the Carter child was the only one in the rifle. The clip which holds five shells was empty.

Acting Coroner B. T. Hedges, called to the home by police, said that he would return a verdict of accidental death.

The child was born August 8, 1930, in Mount Sterling. In addition to her parents, she is survived by three brothers and a sister, David Richard, John W. Jr., James Frederick, and Nancy Ann.

Private funeral services for the child will be held Monday at 3 p. m. at the family home, West High street. The Rev. Clarence Swearingen of the Methodist church will officiate and burial in charge of the Albaugh Co. will be in Forest cemetery. Friends of the family may call at the home Sunday evening.

DELINQUENCY OF YOUTH BLAMED ON WAR, ADULTS

CHICAGO, Sept. 25 — An "alarming" increase in juvenile delinquency today was attributed to "the prevailing laxity" of law enforcement and the general contempt for law by a prominent authority on the subject.

"A spirit of reckless wartime abandon is prevalent among youth today," Rolf T. Harbo, administrative assistant of the FBI asserted.

While admitting that various factors were to blame for the situation, Harbo declared it was due chiefly to laxity among adults.

Harbo spoke before the board of managers of the national congress of the parents and teachers association in Chicago.

Delinquency among minors has increased as much as 100 per cent, and even 200 per cent, in certain metropolitan areas, he said, outlining 14 specific steps to be taken to curb the growing evil.

Maintenance of higher standards of law enforcement was the first step to be taken, he said.

BUTTER GOING UP

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25—The ration point value of butter may be raised again next month, it was reported today, because of a severe shortage in the commodity. Officials said that butter supplies this month have failed to equal scheduled civilian allotments and there is little indication that the situation will improve by next month.

TWELVE BILLION TAX BILL FACES REAL TROUBLE

President Lucky If He Gets Half Of Request, Say Capitol Observers

OPPOSITION IS STRONG

Solons Against Further Increase In Federal Income Levy

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25—Congressional leaders are expressing fears today that President Roosevelt's request for twelve billion dollars in additional revenue will not be met and some of them are now predicting that congress will not pass a tax bill this year.

The house ways and means committee will start hearings a week from Monday, but leaders are growing increasingly pessimistic that congress can be induced to act before the Christmas holidays send the members home until 1944.

The assertion is general in the capital that if Mr. Roosevelt gets half the sum he has asked he will have come off well. There is strong opposition in both the ways and means committee and its counterpart, the senate finance committee, against increasing income tax rates any further.

Rep. Doughton (D) N. C., ways and means committee chairman, has given notice that his committee will "work nights if necessary" to get a bill, but other committee-men feel differently.

George Hostile

On the senate side, Sen. George (D) Ga., head of the finance committee, is openly hostile to any increase in either the individual or corporate tax rate. The treasury department is said to plan recommendation of an increase of 10 percentage points on both the withholding levy on wages and salaries and on corporation taxes.

This would boost the corporate rate from 40 to 50 percent, while the withholding levy would amount to 30 percent instead of 20. The treasury's companion proposal for postwar refunds has not won much sympathy yet among the congressional fiscal experts.

Typical of the attitude of the senate committee was the statement today by Sen. Lucas (D) Ill., opposing increases. "I don't want taxpayers taxed beyond the point where they can meet their obligations," said Lucas, ordinarily a staunch administration supporter.

Hoist Opposed

Another member, Sen. Bailey (D) N. C., stated flatly that "there should be no further increases voted." Sen. George declared that "we can't increase either the personal or corporate rates without seriously impairing" postwar rehabilitation.

On the house side, the ranking Republican on the ways and means committee, Rep. Knutson of Minnesota (Continued on Page Two)

YOUR BUTCHER HAS RIGHT TO LOOK WORRIED

NEW YORK, Sept. 25—If that butcher of yours has a worried look on his face today perhaps he's having a little difficulty with MPR-169.

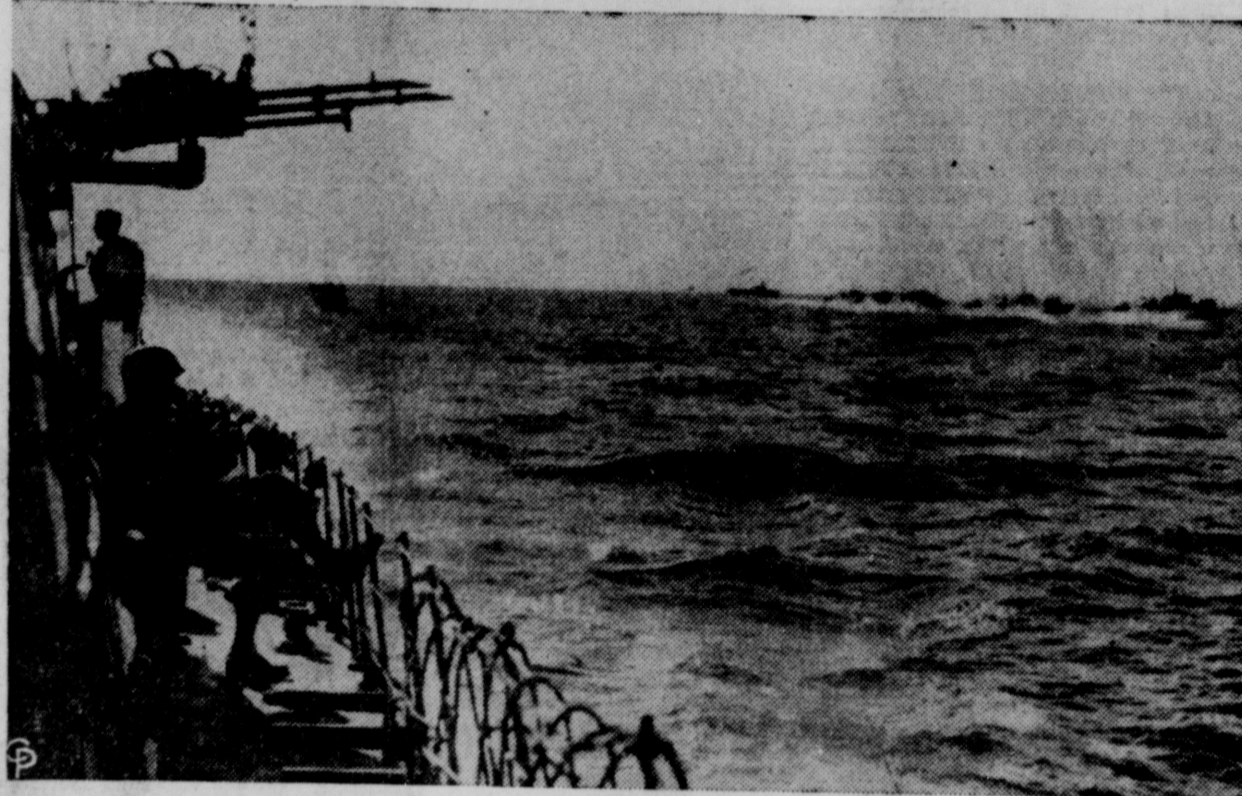

For the benefit of the uneducated: MPR-169 is one of the OPA's many regulations on meat. It's a wordy little tract, containing no less than 22,000 words and 27 amendments.

And, according to the OPA, there's 17 other regulations which should be familiar to your corner meat cutter, among them maximum price regulations 355, 336, 398, 422 and 423.

For good measure there's ration order 16 — which has 69 amendments—the community price ceiling charts and two retail bulletins on cuts.

WATER COMPANY SUIT ORDERED

Council Seeks To Force Utility To Sell Plant To Municipality

Circleville council, meeting Friday evening in special session, voted five to one to instruct City Solicitor Joe W. Adkins to start mandamus proceedings against the Ohio Water Service Co. for purchase of all its local properties.

Councilmen said the city has been attempting for some time to obtain the water plant, but that the Ohio Water Service Co. has refused to sell or to set a price for sale of the water plant and distribution system.

City officials point out that the present contract under which the utility is operating includes a clause which gives the municipality the right to deal with the company for purchase of its holdings here.

The mandamus action will be instituted in the Pickaway county Common Pleas court.

Fourth Ward Councilman Boyd Horn voted against a resolution calling for the mandamus action, while all other members of council, except Frank Lynch, who was absent, favored it. They include J. Donald Mason, George L. Crites, W. M. Reid, Ray B. Anderson and Ray Cook.

RUSS REPORT GIVEN EXPERTS BY STANDLEY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25—Secretary of State Cordell Hull today summoned a meeting of high-ranking advisers on Russian affairs to hear a full report from Admiral William H. Standley, American ambassador to Russia, called home for consultation on the forthcoming meeting of American, British and Soviet representatives in Moscow.

Standley arrived in Washington late yesterday.

There have been persistent reports that the admiral would resign his post to Moscow while in this country. W. Averell Harriman, lend-lease expediter in London, is one of those most frequently mentioned as his successor. Harriman is also under consideration as American representative to the tripartite meeting should the age and health of Secretary Hull prevent him from attending the conference.

OVERCHARGE OF $4.80 ENDS WITH $200 JUDGMENT

JOLIET, Ill., Sept. 25—Joseph Montgomery today had a $200 Joliet justice court judgment against his landlord, Joseph Shurtino, whom he accused of overcharging him 40 cents a month for 12 months.

Montgomery complained to the OPA that Shurtino shut off his water, though he had been paying $1 a month extra for it, when his wife bought a washing machine and that investigation disclosed the tenant who preceded him had been paying only 60 cents a month for water.

An OPA rule provides that a tenant can ask for as much as $50 for each month an overcharge has been made.

SECOND FRONT ADVOCATE WINS CABINET POST

LONDON, Sept. 25—An outspoken advocate of a second front in Western Europe and one of the most promising young ministers in the conservative ranks today held positions in a reshuffled British cabinet.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill, following a dinner at 10 Downing street, announced that Lord Beaverbrook would return to the cabinet at lord privy seal and Richard K. Law, 42-year old son of the late Bonar Law, would fill the newly-created office of minister of state in the foreign office.

It was indicated in official London circles that the changes would most likely be followed by "certain consequential appointments."

No change in the leadership of the agencies directly concerned with fighting the war was seen, and many observers looked upon the shuffling process as strengthening Churchill's war machine.

DRIVER WRECKS TRUCK, PREVENTS SERIOUS CRASH

COLUMBUS, S. C., Sept. 25—Police today praised the action of John H. Smiley, 28, of Greenville, in overturning his huge truck-trailer and preventing what might have been a serious traffic accident.

Police Lieut. William T. Ivey said Smiley's action undoubtedly saved half a dozen lives.

The truck and trailer outfit was loaded with 100 drums of a gasoline by-product weighing 200 pounds each when it started to roll backward down a steep hill late yesterday. The vehicle was headed for heavy traffic when Smiley swung the cab around and upset it. He escaped unhurt.

ITALIANS WOULD BATTLE NAZIS

War Prisoners In U. S. Ask To Be Sent Back Into European Struggle

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25—A large number of the Italian war prisoners in the United States today want to go back and help the Allied armies drive the Germans out of their country.

Many of the Italian war prisoners, from generals down to the rank of privates, have expressed a desire to join the Allied forces in Italy. They have made their views known to American government inspectors who have visited the Italian detention camps in this country recently.

It is estimated there are about 60,000 Italian war prisoners in camps scattered throughout the United States. Among them are several generals and a former Italian minister of war.

Most of the Italians were brought to this country from North Africa, where they were captured by the British and American forces. When they came to America they were happy to be out of the war and wanted no more fighting. Now they are eager to get back into the fight on the side of the Allies.

The change of mind appears to be due chiefly to their hatred of the Germans and an eagerness to help liberate Italy from them. They also believe the Allies are going to win the war, and they (Continued on Page Two)

DE GAULLE SAYS GIRAUD STOLE HIS CORSICA

NEW YORK, Sept. 25—French generals Charles De Gaulle and Henri Honore Giraud were reported at odds again today.

The latest dispute came to a head, Don Hollenbeck reported from Algiers, when De Gaulle during a meeting of the French committee of national liberation shouted at Giraud:

"You stole my Corsica!"

Hollenbeck quoted reliable quarters as the source of his information and said that De Gaulle had sought to have Giraud removed as commander-in-chief of the French armed forces.

The correspondent said that facts concerning the Corsican campaign indicated that the uprising against Nazi occupation forces was a "home grown affair staged by Corsican patriots who had no particular interest in either general."

"The moment the uprising became known in Algiers," said Hollenbeck, "Giraud rushed a battalion of soldiers to the island and was immediately accused by De Gaulle of trying to engineer a coup."

Australian Siege Force Closes On Finschhafen—Balkans Flaring

By International News Service
German evacuation of the large military base of Smolensk on the central front in Russia was confirmed by the German high command today in its regular communique.

Smolensk, 262 miles west and south of Moscow, and the important rail town of Roslavl, on the Smolensk-Bryansk line, "were evacuated without enemy interference after all installations of military importance had been completely destroyed," said the communique broadcast by the Berlin radio.

There was no immediate word from official Soviet sources concerning Nazi abandonment of the key operational base, but it was expected that Moscow would issue a special communique on recapture of the city later in the day if the German reports are true.

The Nazis in all recent instances where they have been forced to relinquish control of important bases have announced the fact before the Russian command.

Americans Advance

The American Fifth Army battered its way forward toward Naples through mountainous terrain above Salerno to smash new dents in the German defense are ringing the west coast Italian port.

Headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said that troops under command of Gen. Mark W. Clark scored the advances despite lively resistance from the Nazis.

Progress of the American and British units was made difficult by the rugged terrain and extensive demolitions carried out by the Germans.

The northward advance of the British Eighth Army along a line east of the Naples battle area continued according to plan, headquarters said.

Occupation of the town of Altamura, 25 miles southwest of Bari, by the Eighth Army was officially confirmed.

Gen. Clark's forces blasted incessantly at the German line guarding Naples in a full-blown assault.

Artillery Duel

A furious artillery duel raged throughout Friday night as the Fifth Army drove steadily forward against the enemy and seized "several miles" of strategic ground north and northeast of Salerno.

The Germans yielded a number of strategic hills in bitter fighting and from these peaks the British and Americans were able to command a view of the plain before Naples.

From their mountain positions the Allied troops watched the Allied air force hammer repeatedly at the enemy communication lines before the city.

Finschhafen, key Japanese port in northeastern New Guinea, felt the hot breath of an Australian siege force. The Aussies, landed several days ago from an amphibious assault force, captured the Finschhafen airfield and established (Continued on Page Two)

Details of "tailor made" governments to fit individual needs are being worked out now by experts familiar with the problems of each occupied country so there will be no delay in setting up the AMG, Gen. Hildring said.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25—French generals Charles De Gaulle and Henri Honore Giraud were reported at odds again today.

The latest dispute came to a head, Don Hollenbeck reported from Algiers, when De Gaulle during a meeting of the French committee of national liberation shouted at Giraud:

"You stole my Corsica!" Hollenbeck quoted reliable quarters as the source of his information and said that De Gaulle had sought to have Giraud removed as commander-in-chief of the French armed forces.

The correspondent said that facts concerning the Corsican campaign indicated that the uprising against Nazi occupation forces was a "home grown affair" staged by Corsican patriots who had no particular interest in either general.

"The moment the uprising became known in Algiers," said Hollenbeck, "Giraud rushed a battalion of soldiers to the island and was immediately accused by De Gaulle of trying to engineer a coup."

BERLIN ADMITS KEY BASE LOST TO RUSS ARMY

American Fifth Army Forges Ahead, Smashing Dents In Hun Defense

Australian Siege Force Closes On Finschhafen—Balkans Flaring

By International News Service
German evacuation of the large military base of Smolensk on the central front in Russia was confirmed by the German high command today in its regular communiqué.

Smolensk, 262 miles west and south of Moscow, and the important rail town of Roslavl, on the Smolensk-Bryansk line, "were evacuated without enemy interference after all installations of military importance had been completely destroyed," said the communiqué broadcast by the Berlin radio.

There was no immediate word from official Soviet sources concerning Nazi abandonment of the key operational base, but it was expected that Moscow would issue a special communiqué on recapture of the city later in the day if the German reports are true.

The Nazis in all recent instances where they have been forced to relinquish control of important bases have announced the fact before the Russian command.

American Advance

The American Fifth Army battered its way forward toward Naples through mountainous terrain above Salerno to smash new dents in the German defense arc ringing the west coast Italian port.

Headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said that troops under command of Gen. Mark W. Clark scored the advances despite lively resistance from the Nazis.

Progress of the American and British units was made difficult by the rugged terrain and extensive demolitions carried out by the Germans.

The northward advance of the British Eighth Army along a line east of the Naples battle area continued according to plan, headquarters said.

Occupation of the town of Altamura, 25 miles southwest of Bari, by the Eighth Army was officially confirmed.

Gen. Clark's forces blasted incessantly at the German line guarding Naples in a full-blown assault.

Artillery Duel

A furious artillery duel raged throughout Friday night as the Fifth Army drove steadily forward against the enemy and seized "several miles" of strategic ground north and northeast of Salerno.

The Germans yielded a number of strategic hills in bitter fighting and from these peaks the British and Americans were able to command a view of the plain before Naples.

From their mountain positions the Allied troops watched the Allied air force hammer repeatedly at the enemy communication lines before the city.

Finschhafen, key Japanese port in northeastern New Guinea, felt the hot breath of an Australian siege force. The Aussies, landed several days ago from an amphibious assault force, captured the Finschhafen airfield and established (Continued on Page Two)

"TAILOR MADE" RULE READY FOR OCCUPIED LANDS

CHICAGO, Sept. 25—Allied Military Government will be ready to assume jurisdiction immediately as each Axis occupied country has been liberated, Maj. Gen. John H. Hildring, chief of the army civil affairs committee, said in Chicago today.

Details of "tailor made" governments to fit individual needs are being worked out now by experts familiar with the problems of each occupied country so there will be no delay in setting up the AMG, Gen. Hildring said.

is composed of high-ranking civil and Army officials who are known to be the political proteges of Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter.

The coup d'etat is to be accomplished by abolishing all production activities by the seven highly-skilled technical supply services and transferring their twenty-two billion dollar purchasing power to the Army service forces, which Somervell now heads. All these technical services are now grouped under Somervell, but he has no control over their expenditures, contract negotiations or production schedules.

Abolish Commands

Actual regulation of production will be turned over to the Army service commands. But the present nine service commands are to be abolished and six new ones created in various production areas, with six political generals named to command the new areas.

The present technical experts, heading the seven technical supply services, will be made "armchair generals," handling routine paper work. They are to be stripped of all authority over production of the war instruments in which they have specialized for years. The cabal made this certain by preparing a new form of contract, which eliminates the technical services from all contracts with construction matters. This elimination was made doubly certain by a notation on the new form itself, which reads, according to one person who saw it:

"No copies of these contracts will be sent to the offices of the chiefs of the technical services for review or any other action."

Claim "Streamlining"

Leaders of the cabal will defend their plot by contending that they propose to streamline "antiquated War department production machinery" in order to speed up production. But their actual proposal is to eliminate the present "commodity organization" production system and substitute a "functional organization."

Prominent industrialists long have derided any claim that a "functional organization" can out-produce a "commodity organization." The Army's present "commodity organization" was drafted from the successful production practices of the Sears-Roebuck, Ford, General Motors and Du Pont De Nemours companies. Industrialists say most "functional organizations" have failed.

The greatest production failure of all time was that of the War department itself in the first World War. It failed to get a single American-built airplane to France before the armistice; no American artillery ever reached U. S. troops in France, forcing them to borrow French 75's; no American-made artillery ammunition ever reached them. And the War department operated on a "functional organization" basis in production. It was because of the system's frightful failure that the department subsequently adopted the present "commodity organization" system after long conferences with successful industrialists.

Take Eliminated

On top of this, the seven technical supply services have been negotiating contracts locally through regional offices scattered all over the United States. This practice has served to eliminate red tape, delay and bottlenecks, the result being a stupendous increase in production.

The cabal would eliminate this successful decentralized procurement program, centering final authority back in Washington and making six service command generals responsible for production in their own areas. This would be a complete reversal of Gen. Marshall's conviction that:

"Decentralization of authority was an imperative requirement for the tremendous war expansion."

One nationally-known industrialist, asked for his opinion as to the effect of shifting army production from a "commodity" to a "functional" basis during wartime, replied:

"It will lose the war. It would be the most monumental mistake in the history of our country. Only fools or worse would advocate it. It would bring production to a state of collapse within six months. It would cost us the price of victory."

There is one fact that links the cabal's plot to give Somervell a twenty-two billion dollar "kitty" during an election year and the cabal's plot to oust Gen. Marshall as chief of staff.

It is a secret order, issued through Somervell, directing that the new production system be placed in effect on September 15, last. This order was issued after the Quebec conference, at which the President and Prime Minister Churchill agreed to make Marshall

MACARTHUR FOR PRESIDENT CLUB DRIVE NOW SPREADING THROUGH MIDDLE WEST

Campaign Begun By Chicago Group Not One of Whom Has Met War Hero

By WILLIAM A. BAKER
Central Press Correspondent

CHICAGO—Without consulting Gen. Douglas MacArthur or anyone representing him, a few Chicago men and women are starting what they hope will become a nation-wide people's movement to draft the war hero for the Republican nomination for president in 1944.

Within the last few weeks "Republican General Douglas MacArthur for President" clubs have been formed in Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Missouri and Wisconsin.

The first of these clubs, incorporated under Illinois law, opened headquarters on the third floor of a Chicago office building, July 9. Ten days later the Republican central committee of Kane county (in which are located the cities of Aurora and Elgin) pledged "united support to the popular demand that Gen. Douglas MacArthur be drafted by the Republican party for the office of president of the United States."

The Illinois club, with other MacArthur supporters in this state, intend to "assume the responsibility" of putting the general's name on the ballot in the Illinois primary, April 11, 1944. It is pointed out that President Roosevelt's name was entered in just this manner in the Illinois primary of 1940.

None of the eight officers of the Illinois club is even acquainted with MacArthur, and none of them is a professional politician. The president is Joseph P. Savage, and the vice president-treasurer, F. L. Boutell.

Both are attorneys with offices here who come to the city daily from their farms about 35 miles west of Chicago in Kane county. Some 12 years ago Savage was a member of the Chicago board of education and Boutell was an alderman in the 48th ward (North Side) and also a Cook county commissioner.

"The group sponsoring General MacArthur for president has no affiliation with any political organization," Boutell told this correspondent in an exclusive interview, and added, "nor is the organization interested in any candidate for public office other than delegates and alternates to the Republican national convention to be held in 1944."

"We had to organize early enough to let candidates for delegate and alternate know that MacArthur's name will be on the ballot."

"We will organize 'General Douglas MacArthur for President clubs throughout the 25 congressional districts in the state of Illinois," Boutell stated, "and assist in the organization of similar clubs throughout the country."

"The officers of this club are paying the expenses of maintaining Illinois headquarters here," Boutell said.

"There will be no public solicitation of funds and there is no fee for membership. Our office staff consists of one woman who is the only paid employee." The Illinois club has had printed red-white-and-blue cardboard lapel tags reading "Republicans, Draft General MacArthur for President," also paper stickers for automobiles and will furnish them to other clubs.

"This movement, which grew out of peril confronting our country, is not confined to Republicans," Boutell explained. "We have Democrats, also, who are supporting it."

"General MacArthur's mother was a Virginian; he was born in Arkansas and attended school in Texas before entering West Point. His father's father was a Democrat who served for one day as interim governor of Wisconsin. This club is founded on the principle that it is the inalienable right of the American people to draft any citizen for the service of his country, and particularly in a time of peril."

Recent polls have shown New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to be the first choice of Republican voters for 1944, Wendell L. Willkie second and General MacArthur a close third, ahead of Ohio's Gov.

John W. Bricker. With Republican chiefs endeavoring to bring about harmony, General MacArthur is considered by certain prominent Republicans as a strong leader behind whom the party would unite, particularly if Governor Dewey, who has said he is not a candidate, should still refuse to consider the nomination next year.

Intra-Party Strife

There is open strife within the party between so-called "interventionists" led by Wendell L. Willkie and so-called "isolationists" amenable to Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune. Furthermore, Willkie and Dewey have no enthusiasm for each other.

Michigan's Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg is the only prominent Republican known to be openly advocating the nomination of MacArthur. The senator has no connection with the MacArthur clubs.

Many Republicans, some of whom are high in party councils, want MacArthur but fear to promote his candidacy in the usual pre-convention ways. If MacArthur is nominated, his friends point out, it must be by a draft the genuineness of which no one can question.

Proponents of MacArthur for president contend that:

(1) He would have a better chance than anyone else against a fourth-term candidacy by President Roosevelt.

(2) He is the person best qualified to lead this country through the perilous times ahead, particularly if Japan has not been defeated by the end of 1944.

Doughton fears that if a bill is not enacted into law this year, a difficult problem of retroactive taxes will have to be met next year. According to the North Carolinian, the new pay-as-you-go system has already complicated the payment of taxes to a serious point and if the retroactive feature was added to the confusion, collection of taxes might verge on a breakdown.

Doughton says the committee is going to spend some time this year on trying to simplify the whole taxpaying procedure.

would like to be in on the winning side at the end.

A majority of the Italian war prisoners appear to be strongly in favor of Marshal Pietro Badoglio, premier of the Italian government which was established following the downfall of Benito Mussolini and his Fascist regime. They respect and admire Marshall Badoglio for his courage in defying the Germans and in surrendering Italy unconditionally to the Allies.

Although the American government is gratified by the attitude of the Italian war prisoners, it is considered doubtful that any large number of them will be sent back to Italy to fight in the near future.

There is not believed to be sufficient shipping to spare for any such move. Furthermore, there are hundreds of thousands of Italian war prisoners in North Africa who also are eager to help the Allied cause, and these would be used first if the services of the Italians were considered necessary.

ed themselves at the nearby Bumli river.

Interest centered on the Italian theatre.

Aiding the Allied offensive were huge forces of aircraft, as well as heavy artillery and tanks. The rugged nature of the terrain made it difficult for the armored forces to operate as effectively as might be desired, but it was no obstacle to the American and British airmen who hampered Nazi reinforcement efforts almost at will.

Test of Slugging

The battle was rapidly developing into a test as to which side could slug the harder, while adding reinforcements. General Clark has been steadily pouring additional forces onto the Salerno beachhead, but German Field Marshal Kesselring has had to contend with the Allied airmen and also with sabotage of communications by Italian patriots.

RAF Beaufighters of the coastal airforce struck their heaviest blow against German air transports since July 25 when they shot down 19 Junkers-52 transport planes attempting to evacuate personnel and supplies from embattled Corsica, headquarters revealed today.

This brought the total Beaufighter bag to 26 for the last two days over the straits between Bastia, in the northeastern corner of the island, and Leghorn on the Italian mainland.

Also hampering the Corsican evacuation, American Mitchell bombers attacked shipping near Leghorn last night. RAF and RCAF Wellingtons blitzed the same port, starting huge fires alongside the quays and blowing up a powerhouse. A big ship also was left damaged.

Hun Base Plastered

Mitchells and Marauders carried out eight separate attacks on key points of a road and railway system 30 miles northeast of Naples. They blasted bridges, road junctions and thoroughfares at Grottaferrata, Maddaloni, Benevento, Avellino, Cancello, Mignano and Amara, creating roadblocks and seriously hampering German reinforcements to the Salerno battle zone.

As the Australian forces of Gen. Douglas MacArthur clamped a pincer from the south and west of Finschhafen, his airmen struck repeatedly at other Jap installations in the area. Villages all along the Yari river in the Markham valley were set afire by Allied fliers, who also battered other military installations from New Britain to the Solomons. An enemy destroyer was bombed in the Bismarck Sea.

Further reverses for the Axis were reported unofficially as having occurred in the Balkans. The Morocco radio broadcast a Yugoslav report that guerrillas had repelled attacks by German tank-supported forces near Split on the Adriatic coast. Two tanks were destroyed and 300 Nazis slain in this clash, while "heavy fighting" near the Italo-Serbian border went in the patriots' favor.

A German troopship and supply vessel were said to have been sunk when the enemy sought to land on the Adriatic islands of Sipanj and Milet. Meanwhile, the Cairo radio said the Nazi high command had ordered an infantry division and an armored force transferred from Romania to Salonika, Greece, to strengthen the Axis position there.

12,000,000 ENSLAVED

LONDON—From figures published in the German and neutral press, careful estimates today placed the number of foreign men and women workers in Germany at about 12,000,000. At the outbreak of the war there were only 500,000 alien workers in the Reich.

PLENTY OF SOFT COAL

NEW YORK—There is no need to ration soft coal at this time, according to Harry W. Vawter, director of the Bituminous Coal Institute, information agency of the soft coal industry. Only protracted interruption of mining, he said, would prevent excess of the 600,000,000 tons set by the government as the output for the industry in 1943.

would like to be in on the winning side at the end.

A majority of the Italian war prisoners appear to be strongly in favor of Marshal Pietro Badoglio, premier of the Italian government which was established following the downfall of Benito Mussolini and his Fascist regime.

They respect and admire Marshal Badoglio for his courage in defying the Germans and in surrendering Italy unconditionally to the Allies.

Although the American government is gratified by the attitude of the Italian war prisoners, it is considered doubtful that any large number of them will be sent back to Italy to fight in the near future.

There is not believed to be sufficient shipping to spare for any such move. Furthermore, there are hundreds of thousands of Italian war prisoners in North Africa who also are eager to help the Allied cause, and these would be used first if the services of the Italians were considered necessary.

JUNIOR FAIR PROGRAM TO BE SET THURSDAY

With the Junior Fair only a few weeks away, George D. McDowell, director of the Pumpkin Show Society department which supervises the youthful exposition, issued a call Saturday to all Junior Fair Board members to meet next Thursday at 7:30 p. m. in his office in the courthouse.

The Junior Fair will be conducted during dates allotted to the Pickaway County Agricultural Society by the Ohio Department of Agriculture. The dates are October 20, 21, 22 and 23, but the Fair is expected to be held only on October 21 and 22. Robert G. Colville, Agricultural Society treasurer, is planning to contract with the Gooding Co., Columbus, to have rides here also on October 20 and 23.

Mr. McDowell said the scope of the Junior Fair will be decided definitely at the meeting next week. Just how many departments will be included in the event is not yet known, although 4-H club boys and girls and vocational agriculture boys and girls are planning to exhibit.

American Fifth Army Forges Ahead, Smashing Dents In Hun Defense

ed themselves at the nearby Buni river.

Interest centered on the Italian theatre.

Aiding the Allied offensive were huge forces of aircraft, as well as heavy artillery and tanks. The rugged nature of the terrain made it difficult for the armored forces to operate as effectively as might be desired, but it was no obstacle to the American and British airmen who hampered Nazi reinforcement efforts almost at will.

Test of Slugging

The battle was rapidly developing into a test as to which side could slug the harder, while adding reinforcements. General Clark has been steadily pouring additional forces onto the Salerno beachhead, but German Field Marshal Kesselring has had to contend with the Allied airmen and also with sabotage of communications by Italian patriots.

RAF Beaufighters of the coastal airforce struck their heaviest blow against German air transports since July 25 when they shot down 19 Junkers-52 transport planes attempting to evacuate personnel and supplies from embattled Corsica, headquarters revealed today.

This brought the total Beaufighter bag to 26 for the last two days over the straits between Bastia, in the northeastern corner of the island, and Leghorn on the Italian mainland.

Also hampering the Corsican evacuation, American Mitchell bombers attacked shipping near Leghorn last night. RAF and RCAF Wellingtons blitzed the same port, starting huge fires alongside the quays and blowing up a powerhouse. A big ship also was left damaged.

Hun Base Plastered

Mitchells and Marauders carried out eight separate attacks on key points of a road and railway system 30 miles northeast of Naples. They blasted bridges, road junctions and thoroughfares at Grottaferrata, Maddaloni, Benevento, Avellino, Cancelli, Mignano and Amors, creating roadblocks and seriously hampering German reinforcements to the Salerno battle zone.

As the Australian forces of Gen. Douglas MacArthur clamped a pincers from the south and west of Finschhafen, his airmen struck repeatedly at other Jap installations in the area. Villages all along the Yari river in the Markham valley were set afire by Allied fliers, who also battered other military installations from New Britain to the Solomons. An enemy destroyer was bombed in the Bismarck Sea.

Further reverses for the Axis were reported unofficially as having occurred in the Balkans. The Morocco radio broadcast a Yugoslav report that guerrillas had repelled attacks by German tank-supported forces near Split on the Adriatic coast. Two tanks were destroyed and 300 Nazis slain in this clash, while "heavy fighting" near the Italo-Serbian border went in the patriots' favor.

A German troopship and supply vessel were said to have been sunk when the enemy sought to land on the Adriatic islands of Sipan and Milet. Meanwhile, the Cairo radio said the Nazi high command had ordered an infantry division and an armored force transferred from Romania to Salonika, Greece, to strengthen the Axis position there.

HEROIC DETACHMENT

THOSE miraculous Nazis are also masters of language, with an inimitable gift for saying things in a way that nobody ever thought of before. Look at the brilliant communique, for instance, that was issued officially after a recent performance in the Salerno fight.

By any ordinary criterion, an observer would have said that Herr Schickelgruber's supermen had taken a bad licking. Certainly they seemed to be stopped short by allied resistance in an enterprise they had undertaken. They were clearly observed to swing around and head in the opposite direction, as fast as they could hoof it, and with whatever gear they could carry with them, leaving the field to their pursuers.

But what did the super-communicé say about the supermen? It proudly announced that the skedaddlers had "detached themselves from the enemy in accordance with plan and taken up a shorter line of resistance."

Apparently that is the way it will be from now on. The procedure brings to mind an old wheeze in which the vocal hero of a wrestling bout boasted, "I threw him violently on top of me."

FAIR PLAY

"WHO won the battle of the Marne?" This question came from a French parliamentary committee, looking into the conduct of the war. It was addressed to Marshal Joffre, commanding general in this battle which turned the tide of World War I. Its aim was to cast a slur on Joffre's work, and to suggest that, come what might, credit ought not to be given to the man at the top.

Joffre's reply was decisive. "I do not know," he said, "who won the battle of the Marne; but I do know who, if it had been lost, would be said to have lost it."

This answer should be borne in mind when citizens are rasped by government's shortcomings. Governmental heads are properly blamed when things go wrong; when campaigns are successful, it is only fair play to distribute a little praise.

HELP FROM THE DISABLED

EVEN the disabled soldiers of the first world war are helping today. Gen. Frank T. Hines, the administrator of veteran affairs, made this plain at the recent New York convention of the Disabled American Veterans. There are 7,000 of them now off the compensation lists because they have defense jobs. Some have even enlisted, having managed to get around their physical handicaps.

Such patriotism puts many of the able-bodied to shame.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

(Editor's Note: Drew Pearson's column today takes the form of a letter written to his sister, Mrs. Gordon Lange of Swarthmore, Pa., congratulating her on the birth of her boy. Looking twenty years ahead to the time that boy will be grown up, Mr. Pearson discloses his post-war philosophy.)

HOPES AND FEARS

MY dear sister:

Congratulations on the most glorious achievement of life! I would give all my books and all the columns I have ever written to be in your husband's shoes right now.

When I look around at the political bickerings of Washington and the way personal jealousies are put ahead of the war, I realize all the more how great is your achievement and how great is the sacrifice and achievement of all the other American women, who are really bearing the chief burden of the war.

You women give birth to children, you watch over them, you cherish and guard them from sickness and accidents, you carefully educate them. And then after twenty years, you send them off to war.

I remember how mother felt about your two brothers in the last war. She never knew, I think, that twice I tried to enlist in the Navy before I finally got into the Army. She was hoping all the time that the war would end, and I very foolishly was hoping that it wouldn't.

YOUTHFUL ZEAL

When it did end, you may possibly remember coming down to the dock in New York to see me off to Serbia. You were only six years old then and probably wouldn't remember the ambition that flamed in my young and enthusiastic breast to help carry out the Woodrow Wilson pledge of "Making the World Safe for Democracy."

During the immediate years of relief work that followed, I found that the real people of Europe were willing enough. They were eager, anxious, but helpless, waiting to be led. They craved permanent peace as nothing else.

I shall never forget those Balkan nights around the campfire high up in the Serbian mountains when our Bulgar prisoners and their Serb guards and our Albanian mule drivers (conscripted against their will into the Serbian army) used to talk about the futility of war and how they might attain permanent peace.

I can still remember their constant repetition, "Natcha Vilson taku," which meant, referring to war: "Wilson would not have it so."

In the end, we let them down.

PEACE ODYSSEY

You may or may not remember also the subsequent years I spent roaming the world as a newspaperman. My secret ambition, though only mother and father knew it, was to be a diplomat. Incurable optimist, I still cherished that ambition to help in a small way to bring peace to the world. But I didn't have enough money to be a diplomat, and started out to study foreign affairs as a newspaperman. I roamed through China, Siberia, Australia and Japan. Unfortunately the more I saw of dip-

DIET AND HEALTH

Nerves Cause Dyspepsia

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

PLATO, in his Dialogues, thus describes at one place a person named Herodicus:

"He had a mortal disease which he perpetually tended, and as recovery was out of the question he passed his whole life as an invalid; he could do nothing but attend upon himself and was in constant torment whenever he departed in anything from his usual regimen, and so dying hard, by the help of science, he struggled on to an old age, a rare reward of his skill."

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The type did not die out in Plato's day. Everyone must know one or two examples of the chronic self-made invalid.

Complaints of Invalids

Doctors know plenty. And any time one fails the least in sympathy or suggests that maybe there isn't anything very serious the matter after all, the chronic invalid flares up and says, "Well, you don't think I enjoy being sick, do you? I wouldn't make myself sick, would I?" But that is just what they do. I am in receipt of a very interesting book with a suggestive subtitle—"A Study of the Will to be Sick." These people have the will to be sick, even though they don't recognize it.

Of all the nervous invalids, the nervous dyspeptics are the most nervous. This can be explained on the basis that the digestive tract is the most primitive structure in the anatomy. The lowest, simplest animals are all stomachs. As we ascend in the scale, a nervous system grows up around the stomach. And man still has a good deal of nervous system around his stomach, and the stomach and digestive system respond to emotions more readily than any other organic system in the body.

Thus emotions certainly stop appetite—anorexia. And they cause nausea. And the nervous system causes spasms in the stomach, or intestine, which pass for indigestion or dyspepsia.

Influenced by Suggestion

Various influences in life—early home training and experiences—acquaintance with a parent or other relative who is always talking about bowels and stomach ulcers or palpitations of the heart, or feeling weak, or vitamins, will create a subconscious personality which concentrates on one or the other of the systems of the body—digestive, heart, nutrition.

All through life that person is conditioned in moments of stress to break down in whatever system his subconscious was attached to. And the subconscious is the largest part of our mental and emotional life—like an iceberg, only one-third is above in the conscious sphere where it can be recognized.

In treatment these people should be treated by psychology, but they usually are not. They are great self-treaters and self-indicators—they switch from pills to powders to liquids to vitamins and back again. They should avoid diets and learn to eat everything—but they go for diets, borrow them from each other, separate their proteins from their carbohydrates and every other fool thing.

They should avoid operations, but they are suckers for them—infectious teeth, tonsils, chronic appendix, gallbladder, etc. They really don't like psychology, which is what is good for them, but they enjoy a long life of suffering.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

F. K.:—What is the best way of disinfecting mattresses?

Answer: It is quite a problem. Heat sterilization, even if apparatus is available, can rarely be done without deleterious effect on cotton, felt or horsehair mattresses. Probably best is to encase the mattress in removable, washable muslin covers during occupancy by patient with contagious disease. Remove the covers and brush the entire surface of the mattress with 2 per cent saponated solution of cresol. For vermin, subject the mattress to hydrocyanic gas in a closed vault for two hours.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may gain success and personal gratification by adhering to a conservative and prudent course in the face of peculiar, mysterious or unprecedented predicaments. Intrigues and glamorous circumstances may lure to irregular ventures. Intuition, idealism and mystical urges may be relied on if based on high spiritual purpose. SUNDAY'S horoscope is a fairly fortunate one, especially for church affairs, for students and for placing the interests on a secure and enduring foundation. Social and cultural associations should happily offset dubious business conditions.

Those whose birthday it is may have an opportunity during the year, to put their affairs and the future on a firm and enduring basis. With application, good methods and perseverance there should be progress and happiness.

ASK ADAM

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

WATKINS E. WRIGHT

CHAPTER TWENTY

BILL WASN'T the only person who would like to have seen Adam North cast opposite someone other than Susan. Jack Vinton felt the same way about it—only he wouldn't have wanted him cast opposite Ruth Moorehouse. His idea of perfect casting would be Brenda in Susan's role, and Adam North cast just as he was now—in the masculine lead. It would have been an ideal arrangement, he thought.

Once Adam started rehearsing those love scenes with Brenda Leigh, he would realize how pleasant it was to kiss her, hold her in his arms, and probably out of the play would come a real romance. Then he could stop worrying about Ruth and Adam, could get rid of those gnawing little worries that had to do with the possibility of Ruth eventually becoming Adam's wife—maybe after he had gone off to war, and Adam was left behind to see Ruth day in and day out.

Ruth was sweet and appealing, and Adam couldn't go on forever being blind to that fact. Besides, Ruth was making herself indispensable to him, was learning the factory business from A to Z. Maybe Adam would end up marrying her, because he couldn't get along without her. "Then where will I be?" Jack mused unhappily.

He was thinking along those lines that evening as he took Ruth home after the rehearsal.

"Why so silent?" Ruth asked suddenly.

"Thinking," said Jack. "And don't you have any doubts about my having a lot to think about."

"I haven't," said Ruth gently, as she laid her hand on Jack's where it held the wheel of his car. "What with things as they are at the factory, and your being called any day."

"That's not all," said Jack.

"What else?"

"You—and Adam—and me."

"Oh!" said Ruth.

"Why so silent?" said Jack, when they had driven some distance without speaking.

"Think I'm," answered Ruth.

"And you're not," the only one who has a lot to think about. "Of all the silly casting ideas, Mr. Platt's certainly got them. She might as well throw Adam at Susan Potter and be done with it."

"Umhm," said Jack. "And maybe I don't live right. Anyway, my prayers go unanswered."

"What prayers?"

"Those about Adam and Brenda. If prayers were answered properly, Brenda would have been given the role Susan Potter has, and then—"

"Don't be silly. Brenda goes in for writing and directing, not acting."

"Just the same," said Jack, "she's the girl Adam ought to be rehearsing love scenes with, and not Susan." He shook his head slowly. "Only I must admit he takes to the part like a duck to water. Heaven knows what'll happen when we really get down to business—and rehearse without holding our parts in one hand. I only wish you and I had some scenes like those Adam and Susan have."

"We couldn't, being cast as brother and sister."

"That's what I mean. I wish we weren't cast in parts like those." Jack steered the car off the wide street they were traversing and turned into one that was little more than a lane. "We scrap enough in real life without having to do it as brother and sister on the stage."

"Where're you going?" Ruth asked.

"Just taking you for a little extra ride," he replied. "You know, the longest way around being the shortest way home, or however it goes."

Ruth said nothing for a moment. "Jack," she began, when the car was rolling along a country road. "I've been doing a lot of thinking here of late."

"Who hasn't?"

"I mean about us—and the war. It's no time to get married—with things as they are. I know perfectly well you'll get around to the subject as soon as you can get me out to your favorite spot for proposing—and I want to forestall you."

"Any time is the time to get married," said Jack. "If two people love each other—and were meant to be married—from the beginning of time."

"I don't think so. And since that scare we had at the factory, I'm sure we ought to wait—that is, if we do marry."

"How long?"

"Until the war is over—and things get back to normal."

"That may be for years."

"I know it."

"Now listen, Ruth, I—"

"No, let me talk, Jack," the girl cut in. "I hate to have you go off—you know that—but I'd rather you went free of any incumbrances."

"Meaning just what?"

"Meaning a wife."

Jack grinned. "Incumbrance is a new name for a man's wife," he said. Then, seriously, "I'd rather go away knowing you'd promised to love me until death did part—even if it did part us—than to leave you free to forget about me and marry someone else."

"Nobody else wants to marry me."

Inside WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—The capitol of the United States is looking mighty fine this late September. It's shining with the good intentions of the lawmakers plus a gallon or two or three of brass and window polish.

A strong current of clear air is blowing through the corridors. The returning legislators brought it with them from that recent refresher course they had back in their districts.

The capitol is a pleasant place to go nowadays than it was the hot, stale days of July before congress adjourned for the recess. Also you can tell by the look in the legislative eye that the lawmakers have returned to Washington recharged for good work.

They have taken on an extra muscle, too. Some of them have been saving wood—not entirely political wood, either. The majority leader in the senate, Alben Barkley, "got a movin' blade and an axe and a hammer and saw and some nails" and went to work on the meadows, the woods and the fences of his old Kentucky home. He filled in for the hired man now gone to war. He said he had a hard time getting timber down there where he came from. You had to wait for the cypress to grow up there sizeable trees before you could cut it down.

Senator Barkley told a good story the other day when somebody asked him for an opinion on the foreign policy of the Republican party. He said he'd have to give an answer that was about as definite as the sermon of a parson down home. The parson didn't want to hurt his congregation's feelings by being too sharp so he said, "I implore you to change your ways—in a measure. Refrain from sinning—to a certain extent. Or you'll be damned—as it were."

Alben Barkley is a capable and conscientious lawmaker who, as President Roosevelt's spokesman in the senate, has had to dodge many a missile aimed at the White House without knowing exactly how the White House wanted him to dodge.

Another popular southern lawmaker, Senator Sam Rayburn, is back briskly tending to the administration's business in the capitol.

The gentleman from Texas cut a pink and blue birthday cake the other day in celebration of his third year as speaker of the house. I said to Mr. Sam, as they call him down in the Fourth district:

"You're certainly a man of ability and integrity, but there must be other reasons for your long success in public life." The speaker was in the Texas legislature when he barely was out of his teens.

"Well," said Mr. Sam, picking his words carefully, "I always believe in people. I trust people and they never let me down. When campaign time comes around, I don't make a lot of false, high falutin promises. I just say I'll do the best I can. And I keep my word. Now looking back a little, if you'll permit me, for the 30 years since I first came to Washington the house of representatives has been my whole life."

A nice life to have, I thought. Nice in many ways. A life of power and national accomplishment. The capitol is a happy place to work in, too. The offices of the speaker are a particularly agreeable shop.

There are many such agreeable offices in the capitol. They give you a feeling of permanence. Make you know that the American world is going well. No wonder the members of congress like to come back year after year to such workshops.

The White House is a pleasant place, too. It's also one of the finest housing houses in the world. I'd like to live in those lovely rooms and be waited on by all those attentive people.

HEROIC DETACHMENT

THOSE miraculous Nazis are also masters of language, with an inimitable gift for saying things in a way that nobody ever thought of before. Look at the brilliant communique, for instance, that was issued officially after a recent performance in the Salerno fight.

By any ordinary criterion, an observer would have said that Herr Schickelgruber's supermen had taken a bad licking. Certainly they seemed to be stopped short by allied resistance in an enterprise they had undertaken. They were clearly observed to swing around and head in the opposite direction, as fast as they could hoof it, and with whatever gear they could carry with them, leaving the field to their pursuers.

But what did the super-communicate say about the supermen? It proudly announced that the skeddaddlers had "detached themselves from the enemy in accordance with plan and taken up a shorter line of resistance."

Apparently that is the way it will be from now on. The procedure brings to mind an old wheeze in which the vocal hero of a wrestling bout boasted, "I threw him violently on top of me."

FAIR PLAY

"WHO won the battle of the Marne?" This question came from a French parliamentary committee, looking into the conduct of the war. It was addressed to Marshal Joffre, commanding general in this battle which turned the tide of World War I. Its aim was to cast a slur on Joffre's work, and to suggest that, come what might, credit ought not to be given to the man at the top.

Joffre's reply was decisive. "I do not know," he said, "who won the battle of the Marne; but I do know who, if it had been lost, would be said to have lost it."

This answer should be borne in mind when citizens are rased by government's shortcomings. Governmental heads are properly blamed when things go wrong; when campaigns are successful, it is only fair play to distribute a little praise.

HELP FROM THE DISABLED

EVEN the disabled soldiers of the first world war are helping today. Gen. Frank T. Hines, the administrator of veteran affairs, made this plain at the recent New York convention of the Disabled American Veterans. There are 7,000 of them now off the compensation lists because they have defense jobs. Some have even enlisted, having managed to get round their physical handicaps.

Such patriotism puts many of the able-bodied to shame.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

(Editor's Note: Drew Pearson's column today takes the form of a letter written to his sister, Mrs. Gordon Lange of Swarthmore, Pa., congratulating her on the birth of her boy. Looking twenty years ahead to the time that boy will be grown up, Mr. Pearson discloses his post-war philosophy.)

HOPES AND FEARS

MY dear sister:

Congratulations on the most glorious achievement of life! I would give all my books and all the columns I have ever written to be in your husband's shoes right now.

When I look around at the political bickerings of Washington and the way personal jealousies are put ahead of the war, I realize all the more how great is your achievement and how great is the sacrifice and achievement of all the other American women, who are really bearing the chief burden of the war.

You women give birth to children, you watch over them, you cherish and guard them from sickness and accidents, you carefully educate them. And then after twenty years, you send them off to war.

I remember how mother felt about your two brothers in the last war. She never knew, I think, that twice I tried to enlist in the Navy before I finally got into the Army. She was hoping all the time that the war would end, and I very foolishly was hoping that it wouldn't.

YOUTHFUL ZEAL

When it did end, you may possibly remember coming down to the dock in New York to see me off to Serbia. You were only six years old then and probably wouldn't remember the ambition that flamed in my young and enthusiastic breast to help carry out the Woodrow Wilson pledge of "Making the World Safe for Democracy."

During the immediate years of relief work that followed, I found that the real people of Europe were willing enough. They were eager, anxious, but helpless, waiting to be led. They craved permanent peace as nothing else.

I shall never forget those Balkan nights around the campfire high up in the Serbian mountains when our Bulgar prisoners and their Serb guards and our Albanian mule drivers (conscripted against their will into the Serbian army) used to talk about the futility of war and how they might attain permanent peace.

I can still remember their constant reiteration, "Natcha Wilson taku," which meant, referring to war: "Wilson would not have it so."

In the end, we let them down.

PEACE ODYSSEY

You may or may not remember also the subsequent years I spent roaming the world as a newspaperman. My secret ambition, though only mother and father knew it, was to be a diplomat. Incurable optimist, I still cherished that ambition to help in a small way to bring peace to the world. But I didn't have enough money to be a diplomat, and started out to study foreign affairs as a newspaperman. I roamed through China, Siberia, Australia and Japan. Unfortunately the more I saw of dip-

DIET AND HEALTH

Nerves Cause Dyspepsia

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

PLATO, in his Dialogues, thus describes at one place a person named Herodotus:

"He had a mortal disease which he perpetually tended, and as recovery was out of the question he

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

passed his whole life as an invalid: he could do nothing but attend upon himself and was in constant torment whenever he departed in anything from his usual regimen, and so dying hard, by the help of science, he struggled on to an old age, a rare reward of his skill."

The type did not die out in Plato's day. Everyone must know one or two examples of the chronic self-made invalid.

Complaints of Invalids

Doctors know plenty. And any time one fails the least in sympathy or suggests that maybe there isn't anything very serious the matter after all, the chronic invalid flares up and says, "Well, you don't think I enjoy being sick, do you? I wouldn't make myself sick, would I?" But that is just what they do. I am in receipt of a very interesting book with a suggestive subtitle—"A Study of the Will to be Sick." These people have the will to be sick, even though they don't recognize it.

Of all the nervous invalids, the nervous dyspeptics are the most nervous. This can be explained on the basis that the digestive tract is the most primitive structure in the anatomy. The lowest, simplest animals are all stomachs. As we ascend in the scale, a nervous system grows up around the stomach. And man still has a good deal of nervous system around his stomach, and the stomach and digestive system respond to emotions more readily than any other organic system in the body.

Thus emotions certainly stop appetite—anorexia. And they cause nausea. And the nervous system causes spasms in the stomach, or intestine, which pass for indigestion or dyspepsia.

Influenced by Suggestion

Various influences in life—early home training and experiences—acquaintance with a parent or other relative who is always talking about bowels and stomach ulcers or palpitations of the heart, or feeling weak, or vitamins, will create a subconscious personality which concentrates on one or the other of the systems of the body—digestive, heart, nutrition.

All through life that person is conditioned in moments of stress to break down in whatever system his subconscious was attached to. And the subconscious is the largest part of our mental and emotional life—like an iceberg, only one-third is above in the conscious sphere where it can be recognized.

In treatment these people should be treated by psychology, but they usually are not. They are great self-treaters and self-indicators—they switch from pills to powders to liquids to vitamins and back again. They should avoid diets and learn to eat everything—but they go for diets, borrow them from each other, separate their proteins from their carbohydrates and every other fool thing.

They should avoid operations, but they are suckers for them—infectious teeth, tonsils, chronic appendix, gallbladder, etc. They really don't like psychology, which is what is good for them, but they enjoy a long life of suffering.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

F. K.:—What is the best way of disinfecting mattresses?

Answer: It is quite a problem. Heat sterilization, even if apparatus is available, can rarely be done without deleterious effect on cotton, felt or horsehair mattresses. Probably best is to encase the mattress in removable, washable muslin covers during occupancy by patient with contagious disease. Remove the covers and brush the entire surface of the mattress with 2 per cent saponated solution of cresol. For vermin, subject the mattress to hydrocyanic gas in a closed vault for two hours.

CHAPTER TWENTY

BILL WASN'T the only person who would like to have seen Adam North cast opposite someone other than Susan. Jack Vinton felt the same way about it—only he wouldn't have wanted him cast opposite Ruth Moorehouse. His idea of perfect casting would be Brenda in Susan's role, and Adam North cast just as he was now—in the masculine lead. It would have been an ideal arrangement, he thought.

Once Adam started rehearsing those love scenes with Brenda Leigh, he would realize how pleasant it was to kiss her, hold her in his arms, and probably out of the play would come a real romance. Then he could stop worrying about Ruth and Adam, could get rid of those gnawing little worries that had to do with the possibility of Ruth eventually becoming Adam's wife—maybe after he had gone off to war, and Adam was left behind to see Ruth day in and day out.

Ruth was sweet and appealing, and Adam couldn't go on forever being blind to that fact. Besides, Ruth was making herself indispensable to him, was learning the factory business from A to Z. Maybe Adam would end up marrying her because he couldn't get along without her. "Then where will I be?" Jack mused unhappily.

He was thinking along those lines that evening as he took Ruth home after the rehearsal.

"Why so silent?" Ruth asked suddenly.

"Thinking," said Jack. "And don't you have any doubts about my having a lot to think about?"

"I haven't," said Ruth gently, as she laid her hand on Jack's where it held the wheel of his car. "What with things as they are at the factory, and your being called any day."

"That's not all," said Jack.

"What else?"

"You—and Adam—and me."

"Oh!" said Ruth.

"Why so silent?" said Jack, when they had driven some distance without speaking.

"Thinking," answered Ruth.

"And you're not the only one who has a lot to think about." She slumped down in the seat. "Of all the silly casting ideas, Mrs. Platt's certainly got them. She might as well throw Adam at Susan Potter and be done with it."

"Umhm," said Jack. "And maybe I don't live right. Anyway, my prayers go unanswered."

"What prayers?"

"Those about Adam and Brenda. If prayers were answered properly, Brenda would have been given the role Susan Potter has, and then—"

"Don't be silly. Brenda goes in for writing and directing, not acting."

"Just the same," said Jack, "she's the girl Adam ought to be rehearsing love scenes with, and not Susan." He shook his head slowly.

"Only I must admit he takes to the part like a duck to water. Heaven knows what'll happen when we really get down to business—and rehearse without holding our parts in one hand. I only wish you and I had some scenes like those Adam and Susan have."

"We couldn't, being cast as brother and sister."

"That's what I mean. I wish we weren't cast in parts like those."

Jack steered the car off the wide street they were traveling and turned into one that was little more than a lane. "We scrap enough in real life without having to do it as brother and sister on the stage."

"Where're you going?" Ruth asked.

"Just taking you for a little extra ride," he replied. "You know, the longest way around being the shortest way home, or however it goes."

Ruth said nothing for a moment. "Jack," she began, when the car was rolling along a country road, "I've been doing a lot of thinking here of late."

"Who hasn't?"

"I mean about us—and the war. It's no time to get married—with things as they are. I know perfectly well you'll get around to the subject as soon as you can get me out to your favorite spot for proposing—and I want to forestall you."

"Any time is the time to get married," said Jack. "If two people love each other—and were meant to be married from the beginning of time."

"I don't think so. And since that scare we had at the factory, I'm sure we ought to wait—that is, if we do marry."

"How long?"

"Until the war is over—and things get back to normal."

"That may be for years."

"I know it."

"Now listen, Ruth, I—"

"No, let me talk, Jack," the girl cut in. "I hate to have you go off—you know that—but I'd rather you went free of any incumbrances."

"Meaning just what?"

"Meaning a wife."

Jack grinned. "Incumbrance is a new name for a man's wife," he said. Then, seriously, "I'd rather go away knowing you'd promised to love me until death did part—even if it did part us—than to leave you free to forget about me and marry someone else."

"Nobody else wants to marry me."

"Sure. Nothing like being occupied—since time passes a lot quicker."

Abiding Values From Israel's History

Shortly before his death, "in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month," Moses spoke to the Children of Israel and reviewed their wanderings and the help the Lord had given them through all their troubles.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Deuteronomy 1-3, 11

By Alfred J. Buescher

Moses reminded them, how, at the end of their wanderings they saw the land the Lord had promised them, and the people asked Moses to choose men to go and explore the land and to come back and report to them.

Moses reminded them how he had chosen 12 men to go and explore the promised land, and how the 12 had gone out and brought back the fruit of the land and told the people that it was a good land.

Even then, said Moses, the people rebelled against the commandment of the Lord and refused to enter the land, murmuring that the Lord hated them and intended them to be destroyed.

Abiding Values From Israel's History

Shortly before his death, "in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month," Moses spoke to the Children of Israel and reviewed their wanderings and the help the Lord had given them through all their troubles.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Deuteronomy 1-3, 11

Moses reminded them how, at the end of their wanderings they saw the land the Lord had promised them, and the people asked Moses to choose men to go and explore the land and to come back and report to them.

Moses reminded them how he had chosen 12 men to go and explore the promised land, and how the 12 had gone out and brought back the fruit of the land and told the people that it was a good land.

Even then, said Moses, the people rebelled against the commandment of the Lord and refused to enter the land, murmuring that the Lord hated them and intended them to be destroyed.

GOLDEN TEXT—Proverbs 14:34.

Presbyterian Installation Service Planned for Sunday Evening at 8

Rev. Carl Kennedy To Be Officially Put In Church Post

Installation ceremonies during which the Rev. Carl L. Kennedy will officially take over the pulpit of the Circleville Presbyterian church will be conducted Sunday at 8 p. m. Many leaders of the church will be present.

A reception is being planned at the conclusion of the service.

The Rev. Clarence S. Gee, general presbyter of the Synod of Ohio, will be in charge of the installation service. Assisting him will be the Rev. Daniel B. Churton, pastor of the Reynoldsburg Presbyterian church, and the Rev. Newland C. Roy, associate pastor of the Broad street Presbyterian church, Columbus.

The Rev. William H. Holloway, moderator of the Columbus Presbyterian and pastor of Bethany Presbyterian church, Columbus, who was to have presided over the service will be unable to attend.

The program will start with the organ prelude, "Ein Feste Burg" arranged by Faulkes and played by Miss Abbe Mills Clarke. The congregation will repeat the Doxology prior to the Invocation by the Rev. Mr. Gee.

After the hymn, the Rev. Mr. Churton will read the Scriptures, I Corinthians 3:1-9.

Special music will include the duet "Be Thou Exalted," by Bruno Huhn, sung by Mrs. Clark Will and Melvin Yates.

The sermon, "Combined Operations," will be preached by the Rev. Clyde O. York, associate pastor of Pleasant Ridge Presbyterian church, Cincinnati.

Constitutional questions will be pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Gee, the prayer of installation will be by the Rev. Mr. Churton, and the Rev. Mr. Gee will offer the prayer of installation. The charge to the pastor will be read by the Rev. Mr. Gee and to the people by the Rev. Mr. Roy.

The hymn, "The Church's One Foundation," by the congregation, will precede the benediction pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Kennedy.

Miss Clarke's organ postlude will be the grand march from "Leonore" symphony, by Raff. The Rev. Mr. Kennedy succeeds the Rev. Robert T. Kelsey as pastor, the latter now filling the pulpit of the Niles, O., church.

REV. HAYSLIP TO PREACH EVANGELISTIC SERIES

The Rev. Ross W. Hayslip, pastor of the Church of Christ in Christian Union, announces a Sunday evening series of evangelistic messages on the general subject, "Great Tears of the Bible."

The sermons will be presented in the following order: Sept. 26: "A Mother's Tears." Oct. 3: "A Profane Man's Tears." Oct. 10: "A Preacher's Tears." Oct. 17: "The Tears of God." Oct. 24: "A Sinner's Tears."

Other sermons will be designed to portray the emotional side of the great Biblical characters with an evangelistic appeal for present day people.

GRANT AND CANOVA

Cary Grant will be the guest star of the Judy Canova program Tuesday at 8 p. m. over CBS, by the special request of the United States Treasury Department in connection with the Third War Bond Drive.

The picture star, playing a regular part in the Canova script, will appear as himself, telephoning Judy at the Rancho Canova because he wants to "pop the vital question." Sylvester and Geranium, overcome by the prospects of Grant's approaching visit, apply beautifying mud packs while Ken Niles makes hay by giving lessons in love. Naturally, none of the Canova crew know that Cary's vital question is "Have you bought a bond?"

CEILING UNLIMITED

Presenting a new feature, "The Flight Story of the Week," the Sunday afternoon "America—Ceiling Unlimited" program brings men of the United States Eighth Air Force and the RAF to the microphone to give their personal accounts of raids over Europe, on Sunday at 2 p. m., over station WBNS. This portion of the broadcast will originate "somewhere in England." Joseph Cotten stars in the dramatic portion of the program. Nan Wynn, soloist, offers two selections, "Either Too Young or Too Old" and "My Ideal."

MOVING DRAMAS

A pair of stirring dramatizations, one describing the hair-raising adventures of three Coast Guardsmen stranded on a Sicilian beachhead, the other based on the experiences of a Merchant Marine captain, make up the Treasury Department's "Bond Wagon" broadcast, on Saturday at 10:15 p. m., over WHKC. The story of the Coast Guardsmen, written and directed by Fritz Block, shows graphically what our fighting men are going through. The captain whose Billy Williams, Sammy Kaye's tall Texan singer is off to the Army. Following the close of his last show on "Everybody's Inn," Billy sang the song he had composed and won his way into the band, "Where the Mountains Reach the Sky." A more recent popular number of Billy's to meet success is, "Sho' Nuff." The singer will report back home to Galveston, Texas for his induction.

used to dream of having a home, settling down in one spot, and raising a family. Lou finally quit bandleading in the East and brought his wife to Hollywood. He bought a home in San Fernando Valley and has a Victory garden. He is Blue Network's West Coast music conductor and has just been signed by Republic Studios to make a picture—in addition to his heavy duties on "What's New?" Lou's raising a family, too. His firstborn, Tommy, is now five years old—and his second son, Harry Victor Brink, arrived August 31.

When Humphrey Bogart was

Edgar Bergen's and Charlie McCarthy's guest recently, his face boasted a two weeks' growth of dark stubble and a convict hair-cut—so "Bogey" really looked tough when he walked to the microphone to kibitz with McCarthy about Charlie's new jail. (Charlie had invited Bogart to be the jail's No. 1 jailbird.) However, Bogart's broad grin and good humor off-mike gave the lie to the hard-bitten personality he has gained with his film career.

John Scott Trotter, rotund good-natured veteran music director of Bing Crosby's Music Hall, heard Thursdays, left Hollywood on September 17 for a three-weeks' vacation—his first in seven years. During this time, John has conducted 389 consecutive broadcasts, in addition to conducting the music for Bing's many records, arranging special music for Bing's U. S. Treasury Department radio appearances—and playing numerous Army camp shows with Bing, (like, Trudy Erwin and the Trotter band boys, John will vacation in his home town of Charlotte, N. C.

nishings soon will fall under the auctioneer's gavel and Les and his wife plan to bid on the complete library which boasts hundreds of valuable books—Les has a fine library of rare old books and is eager to augment it with this San Francisco family's collection.

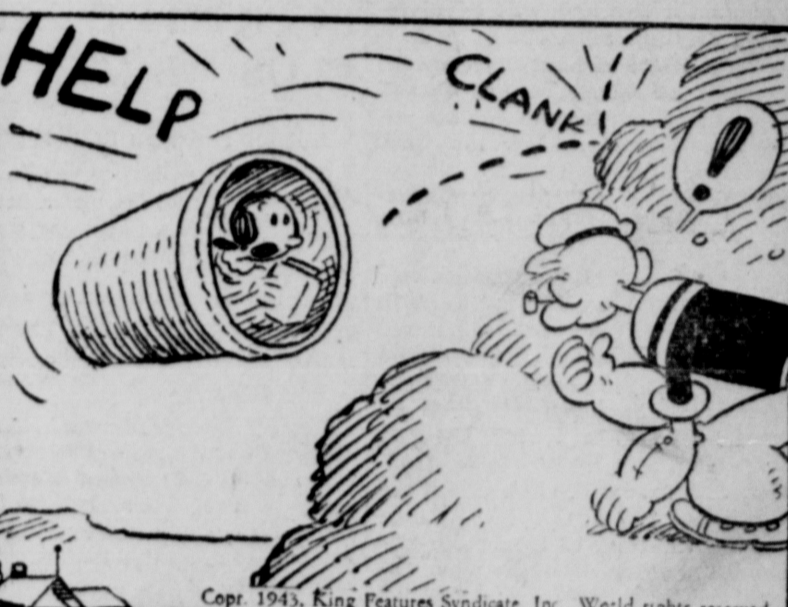

When Sammy Kaye and his orchestra begin an engagement at the Palladium, famed West Coast dancery, next February, it will be the first time that a "sweet" band has occupied the Palladium bandstand. Sammy's swing and sway was similarly the first "sweet" band to play Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook, in N. J. It broke an all-time attendance record then.

GRANT AND CANOVA

Cary Grant will be the guest star of the July Canova program Tuesday at 8 p. m. over CBS, by the special request of the United States Treasury Department in connection with the Third War Bond Drive.

The picture star, playing a regular part in the Canova script, will appear as himself, telephoning Judy at the Rancho Canova because he wants to 'pop the vital question'. Sylvester and Geranium, overcome by the prospects of Grant's approaching visit, apply beautifying mud packs while Ken Niles makes hay by giving lessons in love. Naturally, none of the Canova crew knew that Cary's vital question is "Have you bought a bond?"

CEILING UNLIMITED

Presenting a new feature, "The Flit Story of the Week," the Sunday afternoon "America—Ceiling Unlimited" program brings men of the United States Eighth Air Force and the RAF to the microphone to give their personal accounts of raids over Europe, on Sunday at 2 p. m., over station WBNS. This portion of the broadcast will originate "somewhere in England." Joseph Cotten stars in the dramatic portion of the program. Nan Wynn, soloist, offers two selections, "Either Too Young for Too Old" and "My Ideal."

MOVING DRAMAS

A pair of stirring dramatizations, one describing the hair-raising adventures of three Coast Guardsmen stranded on a Sicilian beachhead, the other based on the experiences of a Merchant Marine captain, make up the Treasury Department's "Bond Wagon" broadcast, on Saturday at 10:15 p. m., over WHKC. The story of the Coast Guardsmen, written and directed by Fritz Blocci, shows graphically what our fighting men are going through. The captain whose

Ration Board Survey Aims At Reducing Gasoline Usage

ALL 'B' AND 'C' CARD HOLDERS BEING CHECKED

Fuel And Tire Shortages Require Prompt Action Reducing Use

SOME CUT 50 PERCENT

Former Circleville Man Loses Driving Right Until December, 1944

The most extensive review of gasoline rations ever conducted by the Office of Price Administration is under way in the Pickaway county War Price and Rationing office, two OPA mileage rationing representatives checking through all supplemental, special and non-highway rations now in effect. All rations are being examined for excessive mileage.

In cases where applicants have received more mileage than they are entitled to, OPA examiners are making recommendations to the local board either for revocation or reduction of the rations.

OPA has emphasized that the gasoline check-up should not be interpreted as a criticism of the rationing board. George D. McDowell, local rationing chairman, said Saturday that the gasoline program has imposed such a burden on the board that it has been unable to give every application as much attention as it would have liked, for reasons beyond its control.

Reduction Necessary

Current gasoline and tire shortages make it imperative that automobile travel be restricted to essential and legitimate uses, the board chairman pointed out.

Elmer Stebleton, local board clerk, said all "B" and "C" rations, specials, trucks, tractors and farm implement permits are being checked.

So far in their examination, which was started Thursday, the state OPA men have found only a few cases where too much gasoline has been allotted according to their standards, but many more rations are to be checked.

The local board did a thorough job of checking in recent weeks, and cut many rations, some as much as 50 percent.

Rations Suspended

As the OPA started to check all gasoline permits, the local board announced suspension of gasoline rations for two men who have violated driving regulations.

Clyde Bates of Ashville, a former resident of Circleville, is banned from operating his automobile until December 31, 1944, the OPA declaring that he falsified his application for a "B" card, by declaring that he was hauling his employer to work.

The OPA said that Bates was also operating an automobile with tires which were not registered with the rationing office. Serial numbers on tires on the Bates car were not the same as those on tires he was using when the last inspection was made. No explanation was provided, OPA investigators said.

William Amos of Circleville was penalized again Saturday when the local mileage panel suspended his right to buy gasoline for an additional 30 days. Amos has been under suspension as a result of a speeding violation, but he has not abided by its orders, the rationing office said. A check of the speedometer on the Amos car showed that it had been driven considerably since Amos was given an order to put the vehicle in the garage for a 60-day period.

Under the OPA ruling Amos is not permitted to operate his automobile until November 29.

TWO INJURED IN KNIFE AND CLUB BATTLE

A club and corn knife fight in the Adelphi district Friday sent Clarence Pollard, 59, under care of a physician for a scalp wound and Arthur Danner, 49, to the same physician for treatment of severed arteries in the right leg. The fight took place at the Pollard residence near Adelphi.

Deputy Sheriff Kenneth Malone of Ross county, who investigated, said that in 1940 Danner's divorced wife, Goldie, married Pollard. Later when Danner returned to the Adelphi community, Pollard rented him a house.

Friday, Pollard went to the farm to feed hogs and Mrs. Pollard was to attend to the milking, the deputy said. Danner is said to have appeared with a club and ordered Pollard off the place, but the latter insisted he would feed his hogs. He returned to his automobile and obtained a corn cutter.

As he came back, said the deputy, who obtained his information from Mrs. Pollard, Danner struck at Pollard with the club and hit the older man on the head, tearing away part of his scalp. As Pollard lunged forward he made a sweep with the corn knife and severed two arteries in Danner's leg near the right knee. James Butcher, a motorist, took Danner to the office of Dr. E. E. Hemmeger in Adelphi. Later Deputy Malone took Pollard to Hemmeger's office for treatment.

When the combatants refused to file charges the deputy sheriff allowed them to return to their respective homes.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
By DREW PEARSON

Still grasping for that elusive hope that the dying embers of peace could be gathered together and blown back into healthy flame, I went with Frank B. Kellogg to sign his permanent peace treaty in Paris. I still have the watch that Kellogg carried on that trip. His watch broke and I loaned him mine. The watch I gave him was, in a way, like his treaty. It was not a very good watch, but it was the best Kellogg could get under the circumstances. Likewise his treaty.

He was carving out history. He dared do what European leaders at first jeered him for. Henry L. Stimson, who followed him, also dared take unprecedented steps to head off war in Asia. Both Kellogg and Stimson were ahead of their time. They will go down in history as great men.

WILL WE BE TOO LATE?

Today I fear that there are not many among our Allied diplomatic leaders who dare march out in front. They are waiting for the public to push from behind. We face the most difficult job of our lives after this war is over, yet we are marking time. If we mark time too long, it will be too late.

At night I come out to the farm where it is clean and wholesome and my neighbors have more important things to do than political throat-cutting. And sometimes I wonder why I don't stay out here all the time and just write books or innocuous fiction that wouldn't make people mad and would not get involved in public debates.

Some people think I enjoy getting mixed up in all this turmoil and being called names by the White House. But I don't. And I am glad Mother is not here now because she so worshipped the President that she would almost have a hard time choosing between him and her son, and would be most unhappy.

CALL OF BATTLE

Of course, a lot of people would give loud cheers if I retired from the political arena. But it seems to me that if I stayed on in the comparative ease and quiet of the farm at a time like this, I should be as guilty of desertion as a soldier at the front.

Maybe I take myself too seriously. Maybe, under all the alleged cynicism, I am just a boy scout after all. But I still cherish that old ideal that I had when you and Mother and Ellen came down to the dock in New York to say goodbye to an enthusiastic youth, sailing off to the back-door of Europe, thinking he could contribute one small bit to carrying out Woodrow Wilson's ideal of a war to end war.

So for better or for worse, I shall keep on battling. And this time I still hope that Julie and Jonathan and my children and your newest born will not be

HONORS IN A. L. GO TO APPLING AND RUDY YORK

NEW YORK, Sept. 25—Short shots on all sports fronts: The Yanks are going to play in the World Series (and may win it) but virtually all other honors will go to members of other teams. . . . Appling of the White Sox is going to win the American league batting title and Musial of the Cards (who also are in the series, as you may have heard) is going to windup as the leading hitter in his circuit. . . . Wakefield, of the Tigers, looks like the rookie of year. . . . Nicholson of the Cubs figures to be the runs batted in champion of the National league and both leagues, while York is in line for honor in the American. . . . And York is still in front in the home run race.

Announcement that Bobby Doerr of the Red Sox has been classified 1-A means that one of the two best second basemen in baseball is headed for the services if he passes exams. . . . IRISH AND PITT TEAMS TO DRAW 65,000 TO TILT

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 25—Heavily favored to win by an overwhelming margin, Notre Dame's 1943 football team made its initial bow this afternoon against Clark Shaughnessy's first Pittsburgh presentation.

Despite the obvious one-sided tinge of the contest, an amazingly large crowd of 65,000 was expected at the game. It's a tribute not only to the drawing power of the Irish, but also to the hold Shaughnessy has taken on the sport populace hereabouts. By comparison, attendance at the five Pitt home games last year was only 61,000.

The game was technically a test of two rival exponents of the T-formation.

Shaughnessy, through his Stanford Rose Bowl champions and his spare-time work with the Chicago Bears, was the first to bring this venerable grid system into prominence. Leahy took the basic formation and added some ideas of his own as a substitute for the historic Irish system.

Ration Board Survey Aims At Reducing Gasoline Usage

ALL 'B' AND 'C' CARD HOLDERS BEING CHECKED

Fuel And Tire Shortages Require Prompt Action Reducing Use

Former Circleville Man Loses Driving Right Until December, 1944

The most extensive review of gasoline rations ever conducted by the Office of Price Administration is under way in the Pickaway county War Price and Rationing office, two OPA mileage rationing representatives checking through all supplemental, special and non-highway rations now in effect. All rations are being examined for excessive mileage.

In cases where applicants have received more mileage than they are entitled to, OPA examiners are making recommendations to the local board either for revocation or reduction of the rations.

OPA has emphasized that the gasoline check-up should not be interpreted as a criticism of the rationing board. George D. McDowell, local rationing chairman, said Saturday that the gasoline program has imposed such a burden on the board that it has been unable to give every application as much attention as it would have liked, for reasons beyond its control.

Reduction Necessary
Current gasoline and tire shortages make it imperative that automobile travel be restricted to essential and legitimate uses, the board chairman pointed out.

Elmer Stebleton, local board clerk, said all "B" and "C" rations, specials, trucks, tractors and farm implement permits are being checked.

So far in their examination, which was started Thursday, the state OPA men have found only a few cases where too much gasoline has been allotted according to their standards, but many more rations are to be checked.

The local board did a thorough job of checking in recent weeks, and cut many rations, some as much as 50 percent.

Rations Suspended
As the OPA started to check all gasoline permits, the local board announced suspension of gasoline rations for two men who have violated driving regulations.

Clyde Bates of Ashville, a former resident of Circleville, is banned from operating his automobile until December 31, 1944, the OPA declaring that he falsified his application for a "B" card, by declaring that he was hauling his employer to work.

The OPA said that Bates was also operating an automobile with tires which were not registered with the rationing office. Serial numbers on tires on the Bates car were not the same as those on tires he was using when the last inspection was made. No explanation was provided, OPA investigators said.

William Amos of Circleville was penalized again Saturday when the local mileage panel suspended his right to buy gasoline for an additional 30 days. Amos has been under suspension as a result of a speeding violation, but he has not abided by its orders, the rationing office said. A check of the speedometer on the Amos car showed that it had been driven considerably since Amos was given an order to put the vehicle in the garage for a 60-day period.

Under the OPA ruling Amos is not permitted to operate his automobile until November 20.

Friday, Pollard went to the farm to feed hogs and Mrs. Pollard was to attend to the milking, the deputy said. Danner is said to have appeared with a club and ordered Pollard off the place, but the latter insisted he would feed his hogs. He returned to his automobile and obtained a corn cutter.

As he came back, said the deputy, who obtained his information from Mrs. Pollard, Danner struck at Pollard with the club and hit the older man on the head, tearing away part of his scalp. As Pollard lunged forward he made a sweep with the corn knife and severed two arteries in Danner's leg near the right knee. James Butcher, a motorist, took Danner to the office of Dr. E. E. Hemmeger in Adelphi. Later Deputy Malone took Pollard to Hemmeger's office for treatment.

When the combatants refused to file charges the deputy sheriff allowed them to return to their respective homes.

lomats, the more I wanted to be a newspaperman.

Still grasping for that elusive hope that the dying embers of peace could be gathered together and blown back into healthy flame, I went with Frank B. Kellogg to sign his permanent peace treaty in Paris. I still have the watch that Kellogg carried on that trip. His watch broke and I loaned him mine. The watch I gave him was, in a way, like his treaty. It was not a very good watch, but it was the best Kellogg could get under the circumstances. Likewise his treaty.

He was carving out history. He dared do what European leaders at first jeered him for. Henry L. Stimson, who followed him, also dared take unprecedented steps to head off war in Asia. Both Kellogg and Stimson were ahead of their time. They will go down in history as great men.

WILL WE BE TOO LATE?

Today I fear that there are not many among our Allied diplomatic leaders who dare march out in front. They are waiting for the public to push from behind. We face the most difficult job of our lives after this war is over, yet we are marking time. If we mark time too long, it will be too late. At night I come out to the farm where it is clean and wholesome and my neighbors have more important things to do than political throat-cutting. And sometimes I wonder why I don't stay out here all the time and just write books or innocuous fiction that wouldn't make people mad and would not get involved in public debates.

Some people think I enjoy getting mixed up in all this turmoil and being called names by the White House. But I don't. And I am glad Mother is not here now because she so worshipped the President that she would almost have a hard time choosing between him and her son, and would be most unhappy.

CALL OF BATTLE

Of course, a lot of people would give loud cheers if I retired from the political arena. But it seems to me that if I stayed on in the comparative ease and quiet of the farm at a time like this, I should be as guilty of desertion as a soldier at the front.

Maybe I take myself too seriously. Maybe, under all the alleged cynicism, I am just a boy scout after all. But I still cherish that old ideal that I had when you and Mother and Ellen came down to the dock in New York to say goodbye to an enthusiastic youth, sailing off to the back-door of Europe, thinking he could contribute one small bit to carrying out Woodrow Wilson's ideal of a war to end war.

So for better or for worse, I shall keep on battling. And this time I still hope that Julie and Jonathan and my children and your newest born will not be marching off to war all over again—twenty years from now. Perhaps this time we can really make it.

This started out to be a letter of congratulations on the most glorious event that can happen to anyone. It has turned into a sermon and a confession. Please forgive me.

WORK ADVANCES ON SECOND BIG OIL PIPE LINE

Progress is being made in construction of the 20-inch petroleum products pipeline with ditching and welding crews now being located just west of Washington C. H. and moving east.

During the next two or three weeks work is expected to be under way in Pickaway county.

Some wives of pipeline officials and government inspectors have already arrived in Circleville to find suitable places in which to live.

The 20-inch line is being built just north of the 24-inch crude oil line which is now in operation.

The "Little Big Inch" is scheduled for completion from the Beaumont, Texas, oil fields as far as Norris City, Ill., by the end of September. No date has been announced yet for completion of the eastern wing.

All river and creek crossings have been completed the whole way along the eastern wing of the line, this work having been finished in this district several weeks ago by the C. S. Foresman Co. When the 24-inch line was built the river crossings were the last phase of the construction.
